1.5.3 Installing from a DOS partition

To prepare for installation from an MS-DOS partition you should simply copy the files from the distribution into a directory called FREEBSD on the Primary DOS partition (C:). For example, to do a minimal installation of FreeBSD from DOS using files copied from the CDROM, you might do something like this:

```
C:\> MD C:\FREEBSD
C:\> XCOPY /S E:\BASE C:\FREEBSD\BASE
Assuming that E: was where your CD was mounted.
```

For as many distributions as you wish to install from DOS (and you have free space for), install each one in a directory under C:\FREEBSD – the BIN dist is only the minimal requirement.

Once you've copied the directories, you can simply launch the installation from floppies as normal and select "DOS" as your media type when the time comes.
