I have managed to install version 6.0 and have had a bit of a play, but not before re-installing because the boot had been sooooo slow

The boot sequence all goes smoothly

until it gets to the following line:

Configuring syscons: keymap blanktime screensaver.

and then stops! I have timed it – it stops for between 4 and 5 minutes every time.

Does your screen goes blank just after the above message? If so, press [Enter] key, you should see the boot being continued, and "login:" waiting for input at the end.

PS I am conscious that I don't really know the etiquette around here too well (apart from not mentioning the logo!) – I don't want to clutter the list with messages of thanks when help is given, but at the same time I don't want to seem ungrateful – which is right?

I think everybody appreciates the message when OP tells when/if the problem is solved.

IMO, there is really no need to generate a message for each person;

Re: very slow boot (newbie)

a combined (if applicable) public thank you note should be enough.
Thanking people who have helped you give them the incentive to keep on helping you & others.
