Hi!

[on a bikeshed:]

3. Actual errors will be reported, and will be read if I don't have to delete thousands of non-errors.

Perhaps a separate mailbox dedicated to this task, with a script (grep?) that parses the emails in that mailbox daily looking for expected messages, noting and deleting them, with unsent messages noted via an email and messages with unexpected content forwarded as well?

Yes, that's what I have hoped for in the past as well.

That script to analyse is not that easy to write, because there are many border cases.

This script never materialized until now, and therefore, for the time being, I seriously hope this patch will be committed.
