My theory is, teach as much as you know, and there is a better chance of moving up or out ;)

Steve

Luckily it's a small operation and I own it ;-)

Steve I am a technical trainer and training developer.
Knowledge is power and in today's world there's little room for the ignorant.

My girl has her hands in training (albeit in occupational health & safety (not her primary job, her superiors just like her approach)) but I have not any formal training ability (actually, I'm a bad teacher).

I just try to give freely what I have learned (I've learned more than I've given), and for some reason, the people I leave my knowledge with end up knowing more than me...go figure :)

Very off topic, but still, the reminder that flow of information is vital is very important IMHO.
