I purchased a SunFire V250 Server machine a little over a year ago. This was all done directly through Sun's web site. At that time I was certain that this machine was listed as having a server-class 3-year warranty. However, I am now finding out that these systems are currently being offered with only a 1-year warranty. Strangely, for some reason, specific warranty information was omitted from my sales quote and all of the web pages relating to warranty have been changed since the end of 2003 when the system was ordered.

Sun is currently checking into this, but as a personal reality check I was wondering if anyone on reading this group has a similar recollection about the V250 warranty being offered during that time frame.

Thanks for any insights you can share.

Regards,
