

Re: How could I cvsup across the gateway

Source: <http://unix.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.unix.bsd.freebsd.misc/2004-08/0454.html>

From: Roger Liu (w20761_at_motorola.com)

Date: 08/12/04

Date: Thu, 12 Aug 2004 15:57:32 +0800

make.conf could give proxy interface like FETCH_ENV
HTTP_PROXY=<http://10.0.0.1>

But where could I set the user name and password.

"wonder" <a@b.com> wrote in message news:cff49c\$22vg\$1@news.hgc.com.hk...

> Roger Liu wrote:

> > Hi, All

> >

> > My computer resides in a LAN and I have a password and user name to access > > the internet (under ms windows). Now I have install FreeBSD4.7 on my > > computer.

> > But how could I cvsup the source and port? I mean I need to write my > > username and password at somewhere to enable my computer tunneling the > > gateway of the LAN to the internet.

> >

> > _____

> > ||<-----<|>----->

Internet

> > | FreeBSD |>-----> | gateway |<-----<

Internet

> > |||

> > -----

> >

> > If there is a script file on which I could write my username and password, I

> > maybe could access the website, rather than using Mozill under X setting > > proxy (That only for web browsing and ftp access, not for cvsup).

> >

> >

> I'll have talk to your sys admin about it.