

Re: Testing for daylight savings on a GMT server

Source: <http://unix.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.unix.solaris/2005-11/0490.html>

From: Robert Bonomi (bonomi_at_host122.r-bonomi.com)

Date: 11/06/05

Date: Sun, 06 Nov 2005 03:03:35 -0000

In article <m3pspkxt94.fsf@invalid.address>, <joe@invalid.address> wrote:

> Christopher Browne <cbbrowne@acm.org> writes:

>

>> > Jim Gibson <jgibson@mail.arc.nasa.gov> writes:

>> >

>> >> And for those who do not follow American politics, the rules in >> >> the U.S. may be changing once again in 2007:

>> >>

>> >> <<http://webexhibits.org/daylightsaving/b.html>>

>> >

>> > FWIW, the provinces in Canada will probably change their rules to >> > match the US because of how much the two countries are linked >> > economically.

>>

>> Except for Saskatchewan, which doesn't do "Daylight Saving Time."

>

> Someone's always got to be different. Like in the U.S. state of > Arizona, where the state as a whole doesn't do DST, but the Navajo > reservation does.

It's even messier than that -- the State of Arizona doesn't do DST.

The Navajo Nation, part of which lies within Arizona _does_ do DST.

The Hopi Indian Reservation, which lies entirely within the Navajo Nation doesn't do DST.

Travelling on a _North/South_ line through AZ, you can encounter FIVE areas where the time is different from surrounding territory.